

Inhuman sentencing of children in Qatar

Briefing for the 33rd session of the Human Rights Council Universal Periodic Review in April 2019, submitted by the Child Rights International Network (www.crin.org), October 2018.

Inhuman sentencing of children in Qatar

1. Life imprisonment is a lawful penalty for offences committed by children aged 16 or older. The death penalty and corporal punishment are prohibited under criminal legislation, but appear to remain lawful under Sharia law for offences committed while under the age of 18.
2. The main laws governing juvenile justice are the Juvenile Act 1994, the Criminal Code 2004 and the Criminal Procedure Code 2004. Sharia laws apply to certain criminal cases when the victim or the alleged offender is a Muslim.¹
3. Children can be held criminally responsible from the age of seven.² Any person under the age of 16 is subject to the Juveniles Law³ and a “juvenile” is defined as any male or female who is older than seven but under 16 years of age.⁴ Under Sharia law people typically become liable for punishments at the onset of puberty.⁵

The legality of inhuman sentencing

Life imprisonment

4. Under the Juvenile Act, people under the age of 16 sentenced for an offence punishable with life imprisonment must be sentenced to imprisonment for up to 10 years.⁶ Persons aged 16 or 17 are liable to sentencing under the Criminal Code, which provides for life imprisonment or “perpetual imprisonment” for a number of offences.⁷ Any person serving life imprisonment may be released subject to conditions under the Law of Organising Prisons. A person serving life imprisonment must serve a minimum of 20 years’ imprisonment before being considered for conditional release.⁸

Death penalty

Relevant offences include theft, adultery, defamation, drinking alcohol, apostasy, retaliation cases and blood money cases.

5. Under the Juvenile Act, children aged over 14 but under 16 who have committed a serious or major offence cannot be sentenced to death, imprisonment with hard labour or flogging. Where the penalty would otherwise be death or life imprisonment, the child must be sentenced for up to 10 years' imprisonment.⁹

6. The Penal Code provides for the death penalty for a number of offences¹⁰ but states that a person under the age of 18 at the time of the offence cannot be sentenced to death.¹¹ However, the Penal Code does not apply to retaliation offences when the alleged offender is Muslim.¹² As murder committed by a Muslim is a retaliation offence, it is likely that the death penalty remains a penalty under Sharia law and could be subject to Sharia provisions rather than those of the Penal Code.¹³

7. Where the death penalty is imposed on a pregnant woman under Sharia law, it is delayed until after delivery in the case of a retaliatory or hadd punishment and in the case of ta'zir (discretionary) punishment, it is commuted for two years or commuted to life imprisonment.¹⁴ The procedure for carrying out an execution is set out in the Law Regulating Prisons.¹⁵

Corporal punishment

8. The Juveniles Act 1994 explicitly prohibits flogging of children under the age of 16.¹⁶ Persons aged 16 and 17 are subject to penalties under the Penal Code, which do not include corporal punishment. However, certain offences committed by and against Muslims are punishable under Sharia law and relevant penalties include flogging and amputation.¹⁷

Inhuman sentencing in practice

9. Executions in Qatar are rare, though Amnesty International estimates that as of 2009, 20 people were under sentences of death.¹⁸ CRIN has found no evidence that any of those sentenced to death were under the age of 18 at the time of the relevant offence. The most recent reported execution took place on 10 March 2003.¹⁹

10. CRIN has not been able to access statistical information on the number of people sentenced to life imprisonment or corporal punishment for offences committed while under the age of 18.

The Review of Qatar by members of the Human Rights Council

11. In light of the clear international human rights consensus against the imposition of the death penalty, life imprisonment and corporal punishment for children, and previous recommendations made by the Committee on the Rights of the Child,²⁰ the Committee Against Torture²¹ and during the Universal Periodic Review,²² we urge members of the Human Rights Council to recommend that Qatar:

- Enact and enforce legislation to explicitly prohibit the death penalty, life imprisonment and corporal punishment for offences committed by children under all forms of law, including Sharia;
- Review the sentences of any person sentenced to life imprisonment for an offence committed while under the age of 18;
- Raise the minimum age of criminal responsibility.

²² During the first cycle of the Universal Periodic Review in 2010, the government accepted recommendations "to enact legislation to abolish all types of corporal punishment and other forms of cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment" and to prohibit all forms of corporal punishment against children" from Mexico and Chile. The government rejected a recommendation from Brazil "[t]o consider abolishing the death penalty and corporal punishment, in particular against children".
